PARIS: 80 KILOMETRES EAST ALONG THE N12

The best way to spend a day in Paris is that you take the car to the train station in Dreux (7 kilometres), park the car in the outdoor parking next to the station and from there take the train Transilien to the end station Paris Montparnasse. Depending on the train, it takes 45-75 minutes. This train also stops in Versailles. From Montparnasse you can either start exploring Paris by foot or take the subway around.

The Dreux-Paris trains run in both directions about once per hour all day and until a bit past midnight, so please check the departure times for your return train before heading out into Paris. Depending on how you plan to get around, it may be advantageous to buy a day ticket for subways and buses in Paris; these are available at the Montparnasse stations. Have fun! ☺
